UDIA NSW appoints new CEO

The Urban Development Institute of Australia NSW (UDIA NSW) is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr Stephen Albin to the role of Chief Executive Officer. Stephen is a highly qualified and skilled business leader who has a decade of experience working in leading membership organisations.

Stephen has worked as Deputy CEO of Tourism Taskforce Australia and as National Policy Manager for the Tourism Council of Australia, and the Property Council of Australia. He most recently worked in Macquarie Bank's Banking and Property Group as an Associate Director. He started his career as a Graduate Economist in the Commonwealth Government.

UDIA NSW President, Ms Judy McKittrick has welcomed Stephen to the role, saying "his depth of experience will contribute significantly to the ongoing growth of the organisation. We look forward to working with him as we continue in our advocacy for the urban development industry."

UDIA NSW represents the leading participants in the urban development industry with over 550 member companies. A quarter of these members are based in regional NSW.

UDIA NSW's advocacy is focussed on three key themes for the development industry:

- affordability;
- investment certainty; and
- sustainability.
