UDIA NSW appoints Acting CEO

The Urban Development Institute of Australia NSW (UDIA NSW) is pleased to announce the appointment of Nick Duncan to the role of Acting Chief Executive Officer. Nick is a highly qualified and respected property development executive with 20 years experience including key leadership roles at listed public companies Stockland and Mirvac. He has also served as a Councillor and Vice President on the UDIA NSW Council.

UDIA NSW President, Judy McKittrick has welcomed Nick to the role, saying "his depth of experience will contribute significantly to the ongoing growth of the organisation. We look forward to working with him as we continue in our advocacy for the urban development industry."

Nick's appointment follows the resignation of Scott Woodcock from the role. He will hold the position for up to six months and assist the Council in the process of finding a permanent replacement for the CEO role.
